Antiques by Anna Analysis

ANTIQUES BY ANNA

Introduction

Analyzing the Digital Journey of Antiques by Anna

- Our project analyzes website performance, engagement patterns, and customer behavior using data from Google Analytics.
- With a focus on customer experience, we evaluated what's working — and what's not — across the site, especially from the lens of our customer persona: Sasha, a high-end, style-savvy vintage collector.
- This analysis aims to uncover actionable solutions to improve conversion, retention, and community engagement for the brand.

*What does Sasha experience when she visits Anna's site
— and why doesn't she stay?*

Persona Creation

Final Persona for Anna Antique Jewelry as decided by the Group
 Sasha: Collector & Trend Connoisseur	Demographic Traits Age: 41 Location: New York, New York Occupation: Philanthropist, Stylist Household Income: $200k Status: Single
Goals: • She looks for artistic inspiration for her own professional work. • She seeks items that can help her maintain her social status and serve as conversation pieces in her social circles. • She looks for like-minded people with luxury and sustainable fashion brands to promote ethical fashion.	Personality Traits: • She carries herself with an air of unshakeable confidence and professional ambition and is very sure of her taste and style. • She loves attending fashion weeks, exclusive events, and pop-up shops. • She loves wine, good food, and a good book.
Challenges: • She often finds it difficult to find truly unique, one-of-a-kind antique jewelry pieces that meet her high standards. • She strives to maintain her identity as a fashionable, professional woman. • She looks to build community with like-minded women.	Opportunities • She is expanding into personal styling services and online fashion courses. • This site introduces her to rare pieces that have been curated specifically for high-net-worth individuals like her, emphasizing rarity and history. • Anna's Antique Jewelry as a brand that aligns with her philanthropic side. She could partner with art organizations or charities she supports to create exclusive fundraising pieces or limited-edition collections where a portion of the proceeds go toward supporting the arts.

Every insight in our project is filtered through one key question: Would Sasha stay? Or bounce?
Antiques by Anna has the pieces — now it needs to deliver the experience to keep Sasha.

Poor Landing Page Engagement (High Bounce Rate)

Why Visitors Land... and Leave

- Google Analytics shows high bounce rate, especially from Instagram traffic
- Users land on generic product grids — no hook, no story, no CTA
- No strong welcome message, curated themes, or emotional hook
- Featured products exist, but they don't tell a story or guide the experience
- Feels like a catalog, not a curated vintage experience

Weak User Retention & Limited of Follow-Up

Why Visitors Don't Come Back

- Google Analytics shows a low percentage of returning users
- No clear email signup prompt or “Join the Collector’s Circle” incentive
- “Favorite” feature exists, but is buried and not tied to an account or email
- Cart abandonment email exists, but it's delayed and only triggers in limited cases
- Sharing options (Facebook, X, Pinterest) are present but not emphasized or integrated into a broader engagement strategy
- The 15% off promo is automatic — it's not leveraged for building a long-term connection
- No personalized messaging, loyalty program, or lifestyle content to keep Sasha engaged - Once Sasha leaves, there's barely a whisper to bring her back.

Strategy Goals

Short term Strategy

1. Clear, Compelling Value Propositions

Each landing page should immediately convey what sets Antiques by Anna apart—whether it’s “Curated Vintage Finds”, “One-of-a-Kind Pieces with a Story”, or “Authenticated Historical Decor.” Use concise, engaging headlines with supportive subheads that reinforce trust, uniqueness, and quality. This ensures visitors instantly understand the value and character of what’s being offered.

2. Make It Feel Like a Curated Vintage Experience

Transform the landing page into more than a catalog—make it feel like a walk through a thoughtfully designed boutique. Use warm, high-resolution lifestyle imagery that reflects the charm and authenticity of vintage pieces in real spaces. Highlight the story behind select items (era, origin, material), and group products by style (e.g., Mid-Century Modern, Victorian) to guide exploration.

3. Enhanced Visuals & Descriptions

Avoid generic product shots and copy. Instead, use editorial-style photos that create ambiance, and write item descriptions that feel like personal introductions—highlighting history, craftsmanship, and ideal styling tips. The goal is to engage both emotion and imagination, encouraging visitors to envision the piece in their own lives.

Strategy Goals

Long-Term Strategy & Bigger Ideas

1. Content & Community Hub

Collectors' Circle – Premium Loyalty Program

Launch a paid “Collectors’ Circle” membership offering:

- Early access to new arrivals and exclusive limited-edition finds
- Monthly webinars on antique care, history, and restoration tips
- Reward points on every purchase, redeemable for future discounts
- Access to a private Facebook group or Slack community where members can share finds, ask for advice, and connect with fellow vintage lovers—driving repeat visits and emotional brand loyalty

Strategy Goals

2. Streamlined Navigation & Calls-to-Action

Simplified User Journey

- Trim down navigation to key product categories (e.g., Bracelet, Jewelry, Art, Earrings) for less friction
- Feature 1–2 bold CTAs on landing pages such as:
 - “Shop the Collection”
 - “Learn More About This Era”

These encourage action without overwhelming the visitor

Dedicated Section: Limited-Time Flea Market Collection

- Add a rotating homepage spotlight banner or featured section to showcase:
 - “This Week’s Flea Market Finds”
 - Countdown timers or tags like “Limited Edition” or “Gone Soon!”
 - Direct links to shop exclusive items only available during flea market periods

Conclusion

- In summary, our analysis identified key ways Antiques by Anna can reduce bounce rates, increase engagement, and build lasting customer loyalty.
- Enhancing landing page design, using personalized and story-driven content, and incorporating social proof will strengthen first impressions and retention.
- Quick wins like conversion tracking and email campaigns offer immediate gains, while long-term efforts like content hubs and loyalty programs will grow brand equity.
- With a balanced approach of data-driven improvements and creative strategy, Antiques by Anna can become a go-to destination that offers not just antiques, but meaningful experiences and inspiration.

About Antiques by Anna

Hello! I'm Anna – a lifelong lover of vintage – and a passionate jewelry curator.

To me, vintage isn't just about old pieces – it's about stories, character, and timeless beauty. I believe everyone deserves jewelry that celebrates who they are and helps them shine in their own unique way.

My goal is to guide you through the world of fashion and couture, helping you discover that one piece that truly speaks to you. Each item I offer is handpicked with care and intention – authentic treasures that reflect style, history, and emotion. They're not just things to own, but experiences to cherish.

I became a vintage dealer out of love for both fashion and antiques, and every piece in my collection is something I would proudly wear or lace in an museum.

Thank you for being part of this journey.

With love,

Anna
